INTRODUCTION

This directory is part of a program developed by the Montana Renewable Resources Bureau of the Energy Division to provide the public with a current guide to renewable energy-related services and information available in the state. Services and suppliers listed in the directory completed an application form which had been distributed statewide to businesses engaged in alternative energy use. Inclusion in it is not to be construed as an endorsement of the service or equipment mentioned.

The directory is arranged by energy sources; in each energy category contractors are listed by the service they offer. A section of consumer information is included, to assist in planning the purchase of equipment and installation services.

CONSUMER INFORMATION

If you are considering the purchase of a renewable energy system, exercise care in your decisions. Consider your investment in the same way you would regard buying a car or a major appliance. Your first job is to acquaint yourself with how the system works. You will probably want to look at systems that are already in operation. Then shop around, checking with several suppliers or installers before making the final decision. If you need engineering help, choose your consultant carefully.

SUPPLIER/INSTALLER

Before you sign a contract with a supplier or installer, check the firm's track record. How many systems have they installed? Do any members of the firm have heating, plumbing, or engineering experience? Have they received formal training from the manufacturer on how to install the system? If not, will the manufacturer have any control over the installation process?

COSTS/REPAIRS

Be sure to obtain a cost estimate in writing. Find out how much of the cost is for the system itself, and how much is estimated for installation. Also, inquire whether any regular maintenance will be required, and if so, how much it will add to the initial cost. See if the installer will offer you a service contract. If the installer does not perform repairs, find out who will, and check to find out whether the manufacturer offers a complete supply of parts.

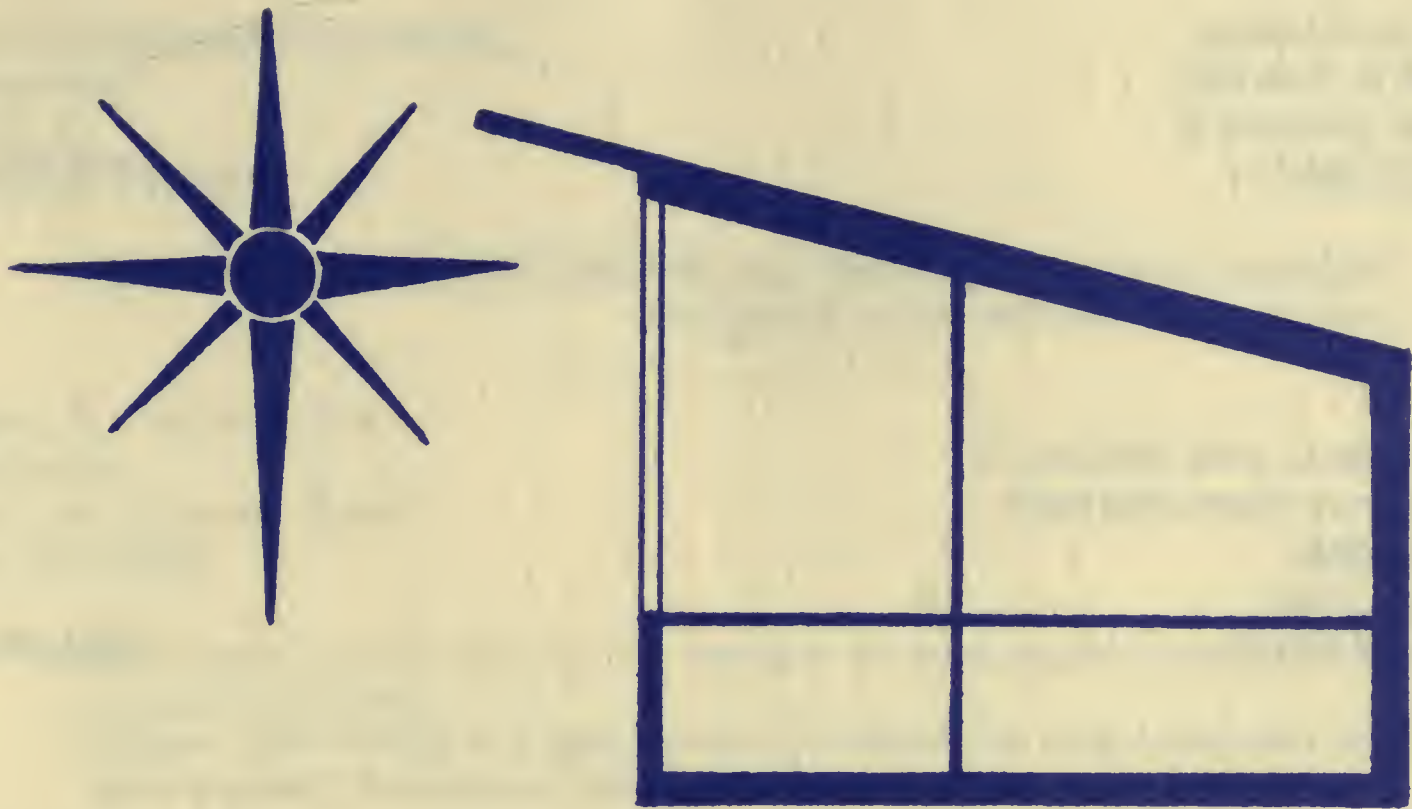

When shopping for any system that uses renewable energy, try to find out about the past performances of both the product itself and the installer. Try to obtain a list of previous buyers of the system you are considering and check with some of them to see if it lived up to its advertising.

WARRANTIES

When examining the warranty be sure to find out:

- A. Is it a full or limited warranty? If it is limited, find out what is covered and what is not.
- B. What responsibilities will you have to keep the warranty current? What must you do to file a warranty claim?
- C. How long will the warranty last? Long-term warranties are appealing, but some may be misleading. Be wary of extended guarantees or promises which appear unrealistic; make sure the company you are dealing with is financially able to back them up.

Before any system is installed, be sure your installer checks local building and zoning regulations. Also, find out whether you will gain any tax advantages from owning such a system; you may be eligible for a reduction or exemption on sales, income or property taxes. Finally, make sure that your system is covered by your home insurance policy.
